Discover the UBC Bachelor + Master of Management Dual Degree

One program. Two degrees.
From the start of the program in your Third Year at UBC, you take business courses that count towards your Master of Management degree, while continuing with your undergraduate studies. After finishing your undergraduate degree, you focus on Master of Management courses for six months, graduating with both a Bachelor’s and a Master’s degree from UBC Sauder’s Robert H. Lee Graduate School.

Learn from diverse classmates.
You’ll be in the unique position of studying with top students from across UBC. Imagine collaborating on a business plan project with a Math major who has stellar quantitative skills, getting inspired by the creative genius of a Fine Arts student, and learning from the analytical mind of a Psychology major. This will be your learning environment from day 1 of the program.

Become career-ready.
UBC Sauder is here to help you make the most of your career potential. From your entry into the program until graduation, we provide career development support, including effective networking, resume writing, personal and professional development, job search techniques, and mock interview practice.

Risk Advisory Consultant at Ernst & Young
UBC Bachelor of Science (Hon.), Food, Nutrition, and Health
UBC Master of Management, Class of 2018

“The UBC MM offered the opportunity to further expand my knowledge and that excited me. My studies up until that point were focused in the sciences, and the world of business was a complete mystery to me. Knowing that the world is underpinned by business, it was an easy decision to pursue the UBC MM as it would better position me to make the most out of my career right after university.”

Program Feature: Community Business Project

UBC B+MM Dual Degree students participate in the Community Business Project which provides students the opportunity to gain consulting experience before graduating. You'll apply your new skills to solve a business problem and challenges for a not-for-profit organization or social enterprise. Our students have worked on a wide range of projects, such as developing business plans and feasibility studies, recruitment and retention strategies or development initiatives.

UBC Bachelor of Arts, Sociology
UBC Master of Management, Class of 2018

“The Community Business Project at UBC Sauder was a form of deep experiential learning. Through my project with MOSAIC BC as my team’s Client Liaison, I gained hands-on consulting experience in a client-facing role, giving me stories to tell in interviews, and preparing me for my current role where I educate and advise small business owners.”
